

Art week 5:

Describing the Minotaur.

Half man half bull, this mythical creature is called a Minotaur! Before you see the Minotaur you can smell him. The stench of rotten flesh wafts from his pores and makes his victims weak from nausea. Alarmingly, he stands at a staggering two metres tall, in addition his entire body is covered in short, shaggy fur. Vast ridged horns protrude from the top of his bull's head also cruel, amber eyes bulge from his heavy skull. Sharp, sinister looking fangs that glint in the darkness curve over his top lip which he uses to rip through his favourite food- human flesh! Big, bulging muscles, more powerful than a raging bull's, cover the whole of the Minotaur's body. He has powerful paws finished with curved claws, as sharp as kitchen knives, to easily slice through skin and bone. His legs stagger on two diamond hard hooves which can break through anything.

Your task is to;

- Draw a picture of The Minotaur and colour him in.
- Label the features of the Minotaur.
- Writing some descriptive sentences underneath.
